

	Problem	Idea	MAU Hypothesis
1	Friends who share a real-life moment can only share their BeReals separately.	“Add Your View” - After posting, invite friends who were there to add their own BeReal to the same shared moment, creating a temporary, swipeable collection.	Creates an additional reason to open BeReal, encouraging more friend-driven participation and repeat engagement.
2	Friends have limited opportunities to create fresh, authentic moments with each other outside BeReal’s daily prompt, which can feel repetitive over time.	“Friend Prompt” - Let users send a personalised prompt to a selected number of friends, inviting them to respond with a BeReal. Responses are temporarily grouped under the prompt.	Creates personal and more friend-driven reasons to open and post on BeReal, adding variety beyond the daily routine and increasing additional posting opportunities and repeat engagement.
3	Users may be more motivated to post when they know their friends have already participated that day.	“Friend Check-In” - Before posting, the locked screen shows users how many friends have posted that day without revealing their BeReals.	Creates social motivation to participate in the daily BeReal, encouraging users to post rather than skip the day.
4	Users may find the daily BeReal experience repetitive, with little variation in what they capture each day.	“Occasional Real-Life Prompt” - Occasionally show an optional prompt during the daily BeReal, giving users a different idea of what to capture.	Adds variety to the daily BeReal experience which may reduce repetition and encourage users to keep participating.
5	Friends may capture similar everyday moments without realising it.	“Real Coincidence” - Detect similar moments between friends’ BeReals and reveal them side-by-side, with an option to share the coincidence with other friends.	Creates unexpected friend-to-friend discovery that can give users additional reasons to open BeReal and interact with friends’ real experiences.
